The Italian Note in Fashion.

It was a safe guess that when Italy entered the war, her popularity with the French would lead them to view everything pertaining to the country with favor, and that the Italian note would make itself manifest in French fashions. Lewis the well known Parisian milliner was first in this field with his Bersaglieri hat modelled on the hat worn by the Italian infantry. This is a jaunty affair with a crown of green coque feathers that sweep over the side and brush the cheek. Not much in line it would seem with Victorian fashions, tight basques and ruffled skirts, though more in harmony with the redingote styles that are approaching, we hear.

Italian Green.

The green of the Italian flag is another note in the same scale, and no doubt before long we will see a revival of other Italian fashions. Coral jewelry, Venetian laces, the rainbow ribbons of Naples, laced basques of black velvet, and striped skirts in wool similar to the cotton ones we have had this summer. There is a perfect mine of such material to draw upon, and we will have a revival of bead embroideries, as well as ecclesiastical motifs, gold on velvet, and all the detail that marks early Italian art. Genoa and Milan have already been drawn upon for velvets, silks and ribbons and many other beautiful fabrics that her mills have been producing while other countries were paralyzed with the war.

Sleeve Vagaries.

Sleeves have been rioting for some time, and have assumed such various forms that it is impossible to account for their vagaries. What they will do next no one knows, but the transparent long sleeve of this summer has been a happy solution for comfort and appearance. How the men must have envied us when the mercury climbed unbearably, with their arms swathed in at least two thicknesses of material. So good looking has been this modest Bishop sleeve with its fullness confined at the wrist by a bracelet of silk, or a cuff of it, that the shape is likely to continue for some time as the conservative note in sleeve fashions.

Ball shaped sleeves are gaining ground and some of the best types have the bell only a short way below the elbow and beneath it a puff of some transparent fabric. The newer way, also Italian in motif, is to cover the lower arm with a long tight cuff of lace that extends from the elbow well down over the hand.

English Woolens Promised.

English woolens are promised much favor, and English homespuns, friezes, tweeds and the like are being imported in quantities for plain tailored costumes. The smoother surfaced cloths, and velvet surfaced wools, such as velours, dovetyn, and zibeline are ready in beautiful dyes, and will surely share with broadcloth and velvet the honors for more elegant street costumes.

Braid Trimmings

are used effectively on silk crepes and chiffon cloth, carrying out the fad for the combination of heavy and light materials. Braid bindings are notable not only in tailored wear but on lighter dresses.

Where combinations of two fabrics are employed, buttons covered with one of the materials are an important trimming note. Jet buttons are increasingly favored, and silk bindings and cordings are an important part of the garniture of most fussy frocks. In fact, this season must be reckoned as pre-eminently a silk season, and the popularity of this class of fabrics bids fair to continue.

Cane Bottom Straws and Velvet Hats.

Very pretty, if a bit overdone, is the fancy for the open weave straw hats that suggest the cane weaving in a chair seat. These show the hair to advantage, or conceal it with linings of tulle or chiffon, and their trimming is usually flowers of some sort. Velvet hats have come in as usual when the Dogstar reigns, and are on the whole rather attractive as a contrast with a filmy gown if worn at the shore, or somewhere where the thickness of their fabric does not seem oppressive. They are decidedly in line with the summer furs that one sees everywhere and nearly as incongruous.

Gettysburg.

On last Wednesday twelve autos loaded with its citizens and band started out of Bradford to boost their Chautauqua, going the round of Webster, Versailles, Bloomer, Covington, Circle Hill, Red River and Gettysburg, stopping here and tooting their horns in several pieces of cheerful music on our streets, then took to road again for their homes.

On Friday a procession of nearly the same magnitude and kind came over here from Versailles to make us aware of their Home Coming festival they will have there for several days.

Our camp meeting, in session nearby for about ten days, folded its tents this morning and wound its way whithersoever it would. It drew a large attendance and it is hoped did some permanent good while here.

The ninth annual Hershey reunion was held last Tuesday on the county fair ground and was attended by a large number of the families of the name, among whom were the relicts of Emanuel and John Hershey. These two persons are quite aged and feeble, but for all that they got there and helped in the festivities. The day was spent in partaking of a bountiful repast which was furnished by the good cooks known to exist among the relationship; some recitations and short speeches and reminiscences and socialities. The same board of officers was continued for another year; collection of $7.71 and dismissed with that old familiar hymn, "Nearer My God to Thee."

J. M. Moul and family had an outing at Orchard Lake, returning home yesterday.

I. B. Miller started for New Mexico and other points yesterday morning, to be gone several weeks on business and pleasure. Mrs. M. J. Coburn spent several days with relatives near Dawn, returning home yesterday.

Roy Coburn spent Sunday visiting his wife's relatives near Columbus.

C. J. Miller drove a circle yesterday afternoon of about thirty miles in his auto with his family and P. B. Miller and wife.

James H. Stoltz has well diggers at work boring a well on the lot on which he is erecting a new dwelling.

Just now it seems ticket making for the election in November is the pastime of a good many of our citizens. It is to be hoped good men will be put up for the support of the voters, so that no matter what party may prevail in the election good men will administer the government.

Gettysburg feels some civic pride on account of its capturing the presidency of the Fair Board. The people here are citizens of no mean city and that such a strange thing should happen is not surprising.

What the Ohio Sunday School Headquarters May Look Like

Announcement that the Ohio Sunday School association is preparing to own its own home and have thereon a building suitable for the purposes of conducting the statewide work which it undertakes, has aroused the liveliest interest not only in Columbus, where the headquarters are at present located, but in Bucyrus, Westerville, Canal Winchester, Ashland and many other localities which for one reason or another think they should be the center of the state Sunday school work.

Architects also have been interested in the project and several of them have volunteered their ideas of what a home should be like. One of the most promising received to date is from the firm of Marriott, Allen & Hall, whose suggestion of a dignified office building of modified classical form of architecture is reproduced herewith.

It is estimated that the rents arising from such a building, in addition to giving the Sunday School association its own headquarters without cost, would produce a considerable revenue for the extension of Sunday school work.

No definite scheme or set of plans has been accepted by the officers of the Sunday School association. Until the amount of money to be expended, and the exact location of the site, have been determined, definite plans sociation says that wherever the headquarters may be erected, the building will be a credit to the 1,300,000 Sunday school pupils of Ohio.

Ohio's Governor Endorses State Sunday School Sustaining Fund

State of Ohio
Executive Department
Columbus

July
Second
Nineteen - fifteen.

Dear Mr. Frankenberg:-

I am in receipt of your letter touching the project of the Ohio Sunday School Association to raise a $100,000.00 sustaining fund for the maintenance of the Sunday School work of the state. I am bound to say that the project appeals to me because an endowment is a sensible business way in which to provide for philanthropic work in order that such work may be continuous and effective in its operations.

The fund contributed by Ohio's sons and daughters in this movement will aid hence in the worthy task of evangelization. The Sunday school, the church and the public school are the mighty constructive forces of the world today. The project for a permanent endowment for the Sunday School Association seems to me commendable in every way, and is a most worthy movement.

Let us remember thoughts of patriotism for the welfare of our fellowmen.

Yours respectfully,

Wm C Mills
Governor.

Herewith is shown a facsimile reproduction of a letter written by Governor Willis to a Columbus newspaper man who asked the chief executive what he thought of the idea of the Sunday schools of the state raising $100,000 to put their work on a permanent basis.
